SUPERINTENDENT'S MESSAGE TO THE CLASS OF 1977

Your class is leaving Wachusett at the end of an era in American education - the era of innovation, relevance, and options. The combination of a sagging economy and sagging scores on national tests of academic performance have caused the citizenry to demand "Back to basics," a reemphasis on the 3 R's. We are thankful that the pendulum has not swung so wildly at Wachusett; we have been more conservative than many systems, and we have far less distance to "go back" to basics.

I hope that as you continue your education - for you all will do that, whether it be in a school or on a job, - you will try to achieve those attributes which have always marked the well-read, educated (though maybe not schooled) person: the ability to read and write and speak the English language clearly and effectively; a global viewpoint extending beyond your own locale and time, including the ability to put yourself in the other person's shoes, to see how he or she perceives the situation; convictions concerning current moral issues; the habit of treating others as you would have them treat you; and finally some particular knowledge or skill which is necessary and in demand, which enables you to earn your own way, if not produce your own food and shelter.

Even as we continually reevaluate how well we have served you, we hope we have done well by you, and we wish you well.

Dear Members of the Class of 1977:

As I sit down to write this brief message to you for inclusion in your school yearbook, I am conscious that one of the great values in such a book is the memories that it will reawaken years after its publication. Within its pages, years from now, you will rediscover classmates only dimly remembered; events that, in their time, were highlights of your life; and a picture here and there will cause you to remember a whole panorama of happenings. Yes, memories are precious reminders of our past, of good times, of struggles endured and won, and of goals we set for some future time. Memories are important to us because they allow us to lay out the fabric of our lives in a discernible pattern. But let us not forget that memories are but a long-range mirror of our day to day existence and that the qualities of these memories will be determined by how we lived each day.

My central message to you is expressed beautifully in the following passage from the Sanskrit:

"Look to this day!
For it is life, the very life of life.
In its brief course lie all the verities and realities of your existence:
The Bliss of growth; the Glory of action; The Splendor of beauty;
For yesterday is already a dream, and tomorrow is only a vision;
But today, well lived, makes every yesterday a dream of happiness,
And every tomorrow a vision of hope.
Look well, therefore, to this day!"

My hope for you is that you look to each day for its challenges and its rewards so that your tomorrows can look at their yesterdays with pride and happiness. I wish you well in the years ahead in whatever endeavors you choose for yourself. Please keep in touch.

Very truly yours,
Harold M. Lane, Jr.

Look to this day
For it is life
In its brief course Lie all
The realities
And truths of existence

The joy of growth

The splendor
action

The glory

For yesterday is but a memory and tomorrow is only a vision

But today, well lived makes every yesterday a memory of happiness

And every tomorrow
a vision of hope.
Look well, therefore,
to this day.

Scott

How are you Scott?

I miss you Scott.

We used to talk together

About how good life was and how we could make it better.

We used to cut first period class on warm, sunny days

And talk of the White Mountains and Castaneda.

You and I used to work and talk together in the art room.

You were pretty good with clay.

I watched you paint your helmet.

You put your life, your body and soul, into that helmet,

Your long blond hair and bright eyes,

All into that fragile helmet.

Scott do you hear me?

Can you?

This is not funny.

Michael doesn't stare into empty space for nothing, you know.

This is not easy for me to say at all.

You used to sit with me on the front lawn

During lunch periods and stretch your arms

Up to the sun and back behind you in the grass.

We'd toss the frisbee around.

You threw it to me.

You threw it the straightest.

Beasley, your dog, misses you too Scott.

Everyone knew how kind and gentle you were,

Especially Beasley.

It was so easy being your friend.

I never, ever, heard you yell at or fight with anyone.

You were free from insult, anger, inhibition,

And all those petty weaknesses I have.

You were free. FREE!

Far too free to be captured by my words.

You used to write, "I am not a number" on computer data cards,

The irony is pathetic.

The computer wanted you Scott,

You were its greatest antagonist.

It knew you drew hard on the joint of life.

What makes me so sad is that

We used to share it together.

I'm deeply sorry Scott,

My words do you an injustice.

SUN AT SEVEN-FIFTEEN

Light shaft walks on water getting not wet,
God's sun piercing the dusk with gleaming eyes?
Or Saint Diogenes searching in regret,
Finding that only nature tells no lies?
Mixture of sad and joy, the awe serene,
Silent heaven bids me young to rest now?
Or King's shiny beacon of the peace dream, Wigh no ripples in the pure, no fears of how?
My stars fallen to sea still twinkle bright,
Soon ebb home to otherwise chaotic black,
Where golden hope leads rebels to lifes' fight,
Thy star abundant but thy will we lack,
Absolute is the way of the evening star,
Follow thee spirit, thy soul will soar far. W.A.S.

the poet
 8th wonder of the world devotes his life to writing words on slips of paper and magically turning them into poems
 tangles of rhyme and philosophy
 He is held in awe by the population they don't see the perfectionist working for a living like everyone else
 only his love sets him apart.

Train whistle at 10:45
 Its lonesome tone carries well on the clear air, making me think of how much I like New England nights and that a hundred other would-be poets
 may wait for its song,
 just as I do.
 That drawn out whine of a whistle brings reassurance that the dark is not as impenetrable as it sometimes seems.
 Sound fills my room
 and then, reluctantly,
 it diminishes,
 moving on to other places,
 other poets.

NOT CARING

The pears are ever-ripe
They fall
At random, untasted,
Grass grows over them
Leaves blow over them,
Snow covers them over
And, in time, they decompose.
They have for thirty-four years,
The roots grow deep.

We have excellent luck with grapes,
Despite Andy's dogs.
The arbor sags under their weight.
Big luscious bunches of Green, purple, and Aurora ones.
When waiting is over and they ripen
My grandmother and my uncles and I

Pick them and put them in a Hand thrown clay bowl
In the center of kitchen table.
After two days
They're good for only the fruit flies.

A PLACE TO REST

Big boulder
Please don't roll over
I'm just here to rest in your shade.
It's so cool
On the moist leaves
Beneath you,
Out of the dayheat.
It's so peaceful,
Your soft moss as a pillow,
Resting against your side.
Somewhere nearby
there's a trickle of water.

I remember you at the bus stop
When we were six, you had a green book bag.

We were off to first grade and ready to take on the world.

Twelve years have come and gone since then.

We both walk to school,
You played football and I work on the yearbook.
We think we're so very grown up And are still ready to take on the world.

THE FOUR YEARS

At first the time passes slowly,
I watch the clock, awaiting anxiously to pass.
With every twisted footstep I gain momentum,
Only to end my years in question.

I saw a star last night and tried to catch it — touch it keep it . . .
But, like a dream
a star is impossible to hold . . .
It teasingly twinkles and then its gone . . .

Peter Bahlo

The passing of time is like a single snowflake melting in the sun

Reflections of our lives
the sunshine of the morning the shadows of the night
as timeless as the ocean
as numerous as the stars memories are a treasure stored away in the closets of our minds.

Escape to crayons
And life's a coloring book
With simple lines —
But stay inside of them,
Break out of the lines
Of conformity
And you're different.
But what makes variety anyway?

I've come to the end of the road.
My ship is long overdue, —
 my paycheck as well.
The sky is gray and cloudy, as are the thoughts that tumble through my mind.

I have these moments
so steady and strong;
I'm feeling so holy and humble.

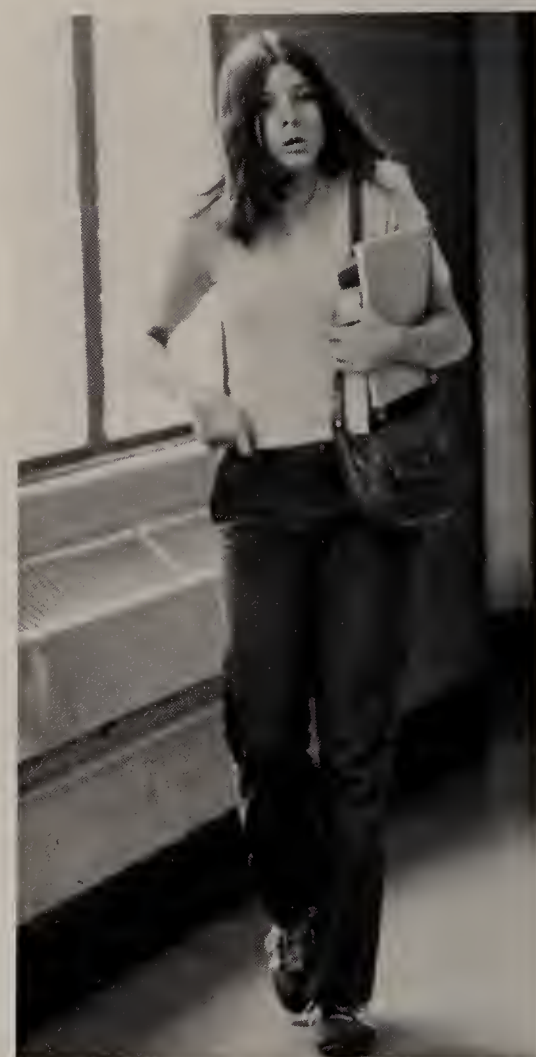

The next thing I know

I'm so worried and weak

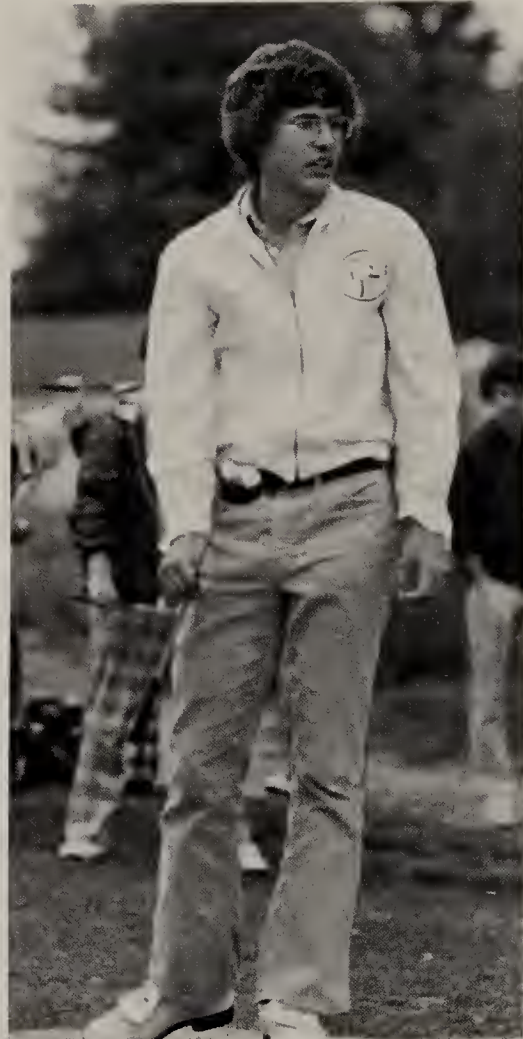

and I feel myself
starting to crumble.

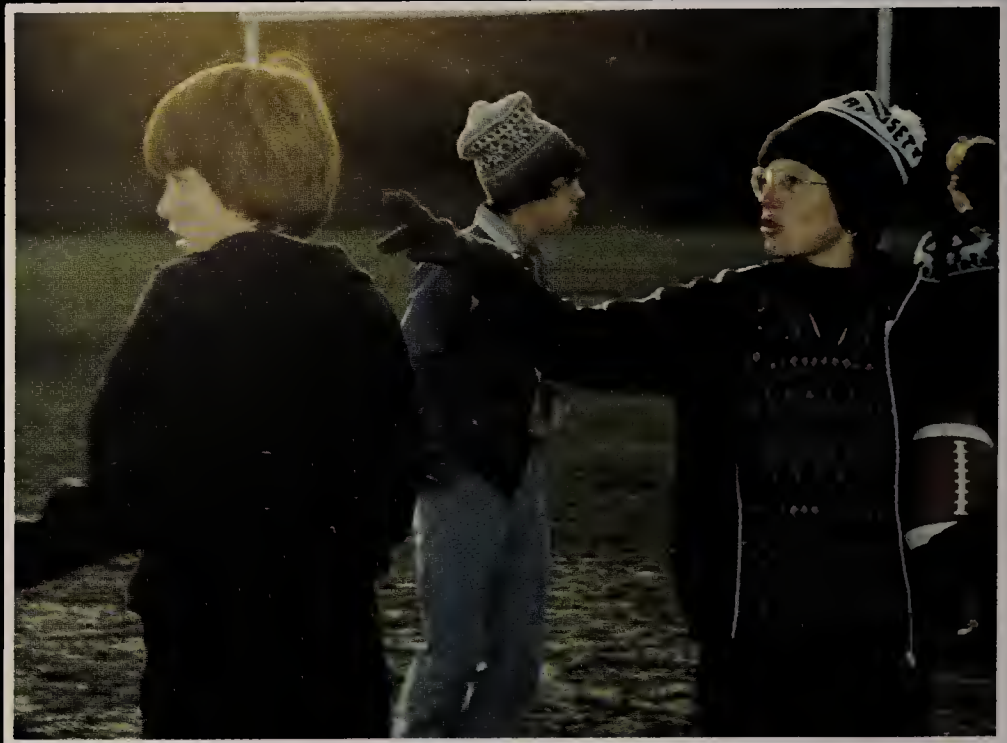

The meanings get lost

You wait for the sun,

"REMEMBER WHEN ARMY PAY WAS NOTHING TO TALK ABOUT?"

It's something to talk about now, because we've just raised it. Again.

Today, the Army starts you at $374 a month (before deductions). That's what you'll earn while you learn a skill.

If you qualify, you can choose to learn how to drive a tank, how to build a bridge, how to use a camera, or how to do just about any kind of job you can think of. And we'll guarantee it in writing, before you enlist.

After four months you'll get a raise to $417. And since so many things in the Army are free — meals, housing, medical and dental care — you can save a lot of it. And that's something to talk about.
